ライティングⅡa

アンドレア カールソン 先生

These days, Japanese matcha is becoming increasingly popular around the world. But, where did tea originate and how did it come to be the popular beverage it is today? In this class, we will first watch a TED-ED animation about the history of tea and focus on some of the vocabulary and language points used in the video. We will then discuss results of a study carried out by the University of Sheffield in the U.K. regarding the issue of forced labor in tea production and in small groups we will share information about what some small businesses are doing to combat environmental and human rights concerns in the tea industry. Finally, we will share ideas regarding topics for the short research papers we will begin writing the following week.
